U.F.A. READY FOR BIG DRIVE

Greenfield Confident that Alberta Organization will make Record Showing.

Herbert Greenfield, Westlock, Vice-President of U.F.A. and chairman of the U.F.A. organization committee, advises that everything is in readiness for the big drive during the first week in November.

Most of the preliminary work has been done and it is expected that on November 1st and November 2nd upwards of 3000 enthusiastic U.F.A. supporters will be in the field visiting their neighbors and soliciting for memberships in the association.

The organization work in both Manitoba and Saskatchewan has been progressing favorably and reports from "district captains" indicate that the morning of November 1st will see upwards of ten thousand active workers beginning their canvass in all the rural districts in the three provinces.

In this drive an endeavor will be made to have a representative of the farmers association visit every resident farmer or between the City of Winnipeg and the Rocky Mountains. The head of every household will be asked to contribute the sum of $6.00--no more no less. This amount will pay for a year's membership in the association, a year's subscription to the official organ and leave $2.00 to be used by the central and district boards for organization purposes.

Associated with Mr. Greenfield on the Alberta Organization Committee are J. M. Goetz of Red Deer and Snow Sears of Nanton. All are members of Board of Directors of the U.F.A. The committee has fixed an objective of 50,000 U.F.A. members for the year 1920 and all are confident that this figure will be reached.

Due World Conditions

OTTAWA, Oct. 8.--Falling wheat prices are bringing communications to Ottawa urging restoration of wheat control. It is not considered likely, however, that the government will decide to restore the wheat control board, although there is authority for such a course should it be considered necessary. The decline in prices, it is observed, is due to world conditions and not to the termination of the wheat board. Restoration of control, it is understood, has not so far been considered a cabinet council.

CALGARY, Oct. 8.--What reason is there for wheat this year selling at lower figure than in 1919? This was a question put to H. W. Wood, president of the United Farmers of Alberta, on Friday. Mr. Wood replied, from the standpoint of the law of supply and demand, he said, "there is absolutely none; the only reason in the world is the inefficiency in the selling of the wheat this year."

Mr. Wood remarked that the United States and Canada had large supplies of wheat to sell; Great Britain and Europe had to buy this wheat. The only question at issue, therefore, was the price. Great Britain and other nations, he said, are working together and acting in an intelligent manner to get this wheat at the lowest possible price, whereas Canada and the United States, as selling nations, are taking no intelligent action whatever to get the best possible price--$5.

The Purpose of the Chataqua Assembly

Gloom and worry are two deadly foes, sapping the vitality of the average man. To take you from the land of misdeeds to the land of hope, to cause you to enjoy a hearty laugh, have been our aim in our minds in building the program we have this season.

Young, broken in spirit, discontent, young, broken in spirit, discontent, you will find some thing to cheer you up the Chataqua. We'll trained entertainers will give you every opportunity to bury your worries. The lectures this year, as heretofore, will give you food for thought, and above all, inspiration that will do you more good than words can tell.

We are fully aware of the fact that it is humanly impossible to build a program that will appeal to all alike, but one thing we can assure, and that is, the average and open minded man will find a world of valuable instruction, plenty of cheer, roasting entertainment and amusement in inspiration.

Since the advent of our Chataqua are only a short time ago and the youth of today are the men of tomorrow, in planning these programs we have selected artists that will appeal to the best that is in us.

In view of the increased cost of transportation, living expenses and the tremendous decline in the purchasing power of a dollar, we are pleased to be able to bring it you so much for the price of your season ticket, six big programs for $1.75. It is almost impossible to get a meal for less than one dollar these days. This year it will pay you to take advantage of the cheap season ticket. You will be able to take your whole family to every number of the 1st, 2nd, 3rd and 4th nights of the season, and you alone can go to a distant place and spend your vacation.

If you are not one of the fortunate, bringing the Chataqua, come to it that

My Dear Boys and Girls:

I am printing a letter from one of our readers which I think you will agree with me is very interesting. I enjoyed reading it, as indeed I enjoy all our boys and girls letters, and next week I am going to print a letter from a boy. As he is the only boy who has yet written to our page, I think his letter deserves a corner to itself.

I would very much like to know what you all do with yourselves during the long winter months, how to manage to go to school and what you do during the long evenings when it is impossible to go out. I wish some of you would write and tell me about this.

Of course the boys and girls of our own country are very interesting to us, but as our correspondent suggests this week, the boys and girls of other countries their ways and occupations must also be interesting and very soon I am going to tell you each week about the boys and girls of some other country so that when you are at school, at play, or helping at home, you may be able to think what the young people in some far off land is doing too, and in that way you will have a broader outlook on life than if you remembered only your own immediate circle and your own country and you know hearing and learning about other countries will make you love your own country more.

We have been having beautiful fall weather lately, have we not, and I suppose you are enjoying every minute of it. Personally I think that the autumn, while it is sad because it tells of the death that comes to all things, is yet a very beautiful season of the year, and methinks in the beautiful colors of the dying leaves we have the promise of life that is yet to come after death.

I will not write more to you now, but shall hope to have letters from you soon. I am taking the names and addresses of all those who write to me and am placing their name on a list for our Secret Service Club, and as soon as we have sufficient we will make arrangements to form the club. So if you have not already written please do not postpone the matter any longer, write at once to Aunt Betty, 901 McCallum Hill Building, Regina, Sask.

CRUSOE'S RETURN TO ENGLAND

One day an English ship came in sight and from it a number of men landed near Crusoe's house. They brought three prisoners. At dusk when the men were asleep, Crusoe approached the captives and found they were the officers of the ship. There had been a mutiny on board.

Crusoe released the three men and the captain was restored to his ship, and leaving the survivors of the mutineers on the island, Crusoe, taking Friday with him, left the island on December 19, 1686, the same day of the month on which he made his escape from Saltee. He arrived in England June 11, 1687, after an absence of thirty-five years. Soon after he found that his estate had been managed so well during his absence that he was worth $5,000 a year. He afterwards married and settled down in Bedfordshire, England. But after his wife's death the old roving spirit came upon him once again and he started out revisiting his island, which had now become a thriving colony. Eventually he reached London, on January 10, 1705, after another absence of over ten years.

"Here," he says, "I resolved to prepare for a longer journey than all those I had yet taken, having lived a life of infinite variety, seventy-two years and learned to know the value of retirement and the blessing of ending our days in peace."

Letter to Aunt Betty

Erskine, Alta., Sept. 7, 1920

Dear Aunt Betty:

I will answer your letter and tell you all I can. I am very glad there is a Children's Corner in the Erskine paper, for I am very fond of reading; I am very much in favor of a Service Club of our own.

I am 16 years old, and I am in the seventh grade. I like drawing very much, I like all the other studies except history and geography. The games I like the best are "Pomp, Pomp, pull away," Ribbons and Rounders; but I much rather do fancy work or read. I am five feet and six inches tall, and I am rather stout. I have blue eyes and fair hair. It does not much matter which I do out-doors work or housework. I like to do either. I always like to be out in the woods and fields, for I like to watch the grain, grass and flowers grow. I like the best of all to hear the birds sing so merrily, their sweet songs. I also like to pick berries, but I do not like the wasps which you are almost sure to run across their nest while picking berries. I have got stung by them twice this year already. I am going to school at present, and wish I could go to school all the time, but can't, for I have to stay home and help mother and father in haying and harvest. In the spring I have to stay home and take care of the little children and cook the meals.

I have four sisters and four brothers, their names are Maurice, Jackie, William, Nellie, Frances,

Then the Fun Began

Mabel, Dorothea and James, he is the baby, sixteen months old. Frances, Nellie, Maurice, Jackie and William are going to school. My sisters and brothers all like to go to school very much. They also like to go into the woods and pick berries and flowers and watch the gophers, chipmunks, and listen to the birds sing. Sometimes after the boys have their morning work done, they go roaming through woods and fields. They come back at night bringing berries and flowers. The boys like to help father get the horses and do other little jobs towards helping to get the farm work done. They can't do very big jobs, for they are only eleven, eight and seven years old.

My sisters who are going to school are fifteen and fourteen years old. They like sewing and reading better than any games. The games they like to play at school are "Pomp, Pomp, pull away, Jacob and Ruth, and Ribbons. My little sisters are five and six years old. They can't wait until they are old enough to go to school, they get lonesome for us when we stay away all day at school. In the morning when we start to school they cry to go along with us. When we are alone with us at school once in a while, and they behave very nicely. When they arrive home at night they tell mother and father they wish they could go to school all the time, for they like it better than going any other place.

I have no playmates to tell you of, for all the boys and girls are so much younger than I am, that the games they want to play are not games older boys and girls would like to play.

We are not living on the open prairies of Alberta. We live more in the wooded part. We live fifteen miles from Erskine and three miles from Red Deer river. We all like the country where we live ever so much better than the open prairies, for we have shelter in winter and shade in the summer. We have also more berries and song birds. But there is one thing unpleasant about the hilly and brushy country, that is, the farm land is all in small patches among the hills and brush, and therefore, it is much more difficult farming than it is on the open prairies. Our house is built on a big flat hill. From the house we can see the banks on the other side of the Red Deer river. We also can see homes of other people living on the other side of the river.

I wonder if other boys and girls think the same as I do of spring and autumn. This is what I think. Spring is the most charming season of the year, for it is the season every animal awakes from their long winter sleep. The birds with their sweet songs come in flocks from the south, making all of us happy and gay, and we start in with our spring work with a happy will. It is really lovely to work when there are birds singing all around us, and there are fragrant perfumes in the air. Autumn is a very sad season, for all the birds are leaving for the south, and all the cheering and cunning little animals are leaving you for the winter. All the flowers and berries vanishing. Old Jack Frost has his little fairy folks out painting the leaves of the trees. Soon there will come a little breeze and all the trees will be bare. When I see all this happening I feel as if I was losing a great friend.

I do not know what I would like to see on our page, but I think it would be nice to have the boys and girls of all countries to make up stories of their own and write them. And also write true stories from their own experience of animals and birds which they have seen. I think that would make our club more interesting, and we will learn about animals all over the world.

Wishing you and all the members a happy time, and good luck the rest of your lifetime.

I remain your niece,
VIOLA AGNES DEGRAFF

AESOP'S FABLES

The Fox Repaid in His Own Coin

Once upon a time there was a poor widow, and in the little yard attached to her dwelling was a very fine cock called Chanticleer. One morning this bird awoke in a great fright and told his mate Pertelote, of a horrible dream he had had, of a beast like a hound that had threatened him. Dame Pertelote laughed her Chanticleer's fears to scorn. She said it was the result of indigestion, for which she suggested he should take certain medicines.

While Chanticleer was enumerating stories of dreams that had come true he looked at the face of Dame Pertelote, and taking courage, begged that they should talk of cheerful things. By this time daylight had come and, descending from his perch Chanticleer strutted around like a lion, chuckling whenever he found a corn.

One day as he strutted around the yard crowing at the sun, he spied a fox that had crept in the night before and hidden in a bed of herbs. Then Chanticleer, reminded of his dream, would have fled, but the fox said:

"Gentle sir, alas! why would you be not afraid of me. I am your friend. I only came to hear you sing, for truly to you as sweet a voice is given as any angel hath that is in heaven. Your father and mother have both been in my house. I never heard anyone except you sing so well as your father did. Let us hear now if you can imitate your father."

Chanticleer, much flattered, stood high upon his toes, stretched his neck and made his eyes close and began to crow right loudly. Then Dan Russell the fox jumped up and seized him by the throat and fled with him to the wood.

Such an alarm was then raised by Dame Pertelote and the other hens that the widow and her daughters ran out of their house, and seeing how matters were, called the neighbors, who joined in the chase. Jack Straw and all his company never made much to do as was caused by the chase after the fox and Chanticleer. But as he was lying helpless in fear on the fox's back he thought of a plan.

"Dear Sir," said he to his captor, "if I were you I would turn on you proud fellows and tell them that now I am near the wood, the cock shall here abide and I will surely eat him when I choose, whatever you may do."

"In faith," declared the fox, "it shall be done."

As he spoke the cock slipped from his mouth and quickly flew high up on a tree out of reach. The fox then cried he was sorry for frightening the cock. He did it, he said, with no base intent; and if Chanticleer would only come down again, he would tell him why he had acted as he had done.

But Chanticleer replied that he had been deceived once and would not be deceived again. And so the fox was paid in his own coin—flattery.

Attended Convention

The editor and assistant editor attended the convention of the Alberta Division of the Canadian Press Association held in Calgary on Thursday and Friday last. There was a good proportion of the editors of Alberta publications present and a very live discussion took place on the very many serious problems which confront the smaller newspaper especially. The labor question, the news print situation and the great problem of how to make both ends meet the middle as regards prices for advertising, subscriptions and job printing, were thoroughly discussed, and when everything was considered it was found that with one or two exceptions where conditions were more favorable, that most of the weekly papers were not getting anywhere near what they were entitled to, considering all the elements which they have to contend with today, and to save themselves will have to seriously consider the rearrangement of their financial budget.

There were addresses on the paper situation by experts who were not connected with the manufacture of paper, but who are in the market all the year for paper supplies and their opinion is that it will be years before any appreciable reduction in paper prices can be made, the American market absorbing almost all the available supplies and the paper mills going behind over 2,000 tons a day.

As far as advertising rates were considered it was found that taking all the advanced costs in every department of newspaper building into consideration, that the owner of the average country newspaper is still running it as a sentimental proposition, and that if he wants to survive he must take measures to at least keep up with these advanced costs.

The members of the Association were entertained at a luncheon at the Palliser on Thursday noon by the Calgary Herald, and the management of the Grand Theater also very kindly provided box seats for the show,
"Camouflage," at the Grand on Friday night, which ended a very busy but enjoyable session of the fourth estate in Alberta.

Wouldn't this be an awfully hard world to live in if we were compelled to do all the things we tell other people we would do if we were in their place?

An estimate of Great Britain's probable requirements in imports of Wheat: 217,500,000 bushels; barley, 50,600,000 bushels; oats, 60,000,000 on the official forecast of the United Kingdom yields, which have still to be confirmed by actual results.

Years ago, on a fine estate in England, he had possessed a little sister who was all the kin he could claim in the world. He more than loved the girl—he worshipped her as few men have been known to do. She could not make a wish he would not grant. And the girl, she loved the big brother better than anything in the world, until that other love awakened within her. One day she forsaw the brother, leaving a brief note behind. She had married a man who was beneath her station in life, and fled with him across the ocean. Halibut faced his grief and stood alone. From that day his world had been a lonely world. Change of scenes, excitement, or even the chase could never make him forget. The sister's face was always there. He sold the estate and sought forgetfulness in travel. Then he did what he should have done at first—he sought the girl. But he found her not. He joined the army, but even the thrill of the fight gave him no respite from sad memories. At last he turned for solace to the Wild, and in the big house, with one old family servant, he had lived for years now. Out in the open all day long, and at night by his fireplace, with a picture of the glowing coals and a portrait looking from the wall—this was the man's life as it was lived.

As the horseman penetrated deeply into the forest gloom and the heavy shadows gathered more closely about him, making the trail hard to keep in his blackness, he began to wish he had asked Dick to come out with him, as he sometimes did when forced to return after night. The woods had a way of playing pranks upon him. He was not bred for the bush, and therefore there were things about it that he could never hope to learn at his age. Still he knew the trail he was on well enough to have followed it blindly, had it been necessary. He settled lower in the saddle, and with his mind on Saythe and Watson and the Bushwhackers, he passed down the trail.

He had been perhaps two hours in the saddle, and was nearing what was known as the Fire-Lick, a low, charred scar of territory that had been swept by fire years ago, when he was aroused from his meditations by the growls of his hounds. The dogs were acting in a most peculiar manner, running ahead for a few feet and then retreating almost beneath the horse's heels. The horse, too, seemed to catch their spirit, for he reared once or twice, and would have thrown the rider had he been other than Halibut himself.

"What the devil!" cried the man, striking the horse with the quirt and whistling to the hounds. "What's the matter with you all, anyway?"

The horse leaped forward so suddenly that an overhanging branch caught the rider's cap, and swept it from his head. With a promise that he would teach the animal to act differently, the Colonel slid down from his saddle and with the bridle-rein over his arm stooped to feel in the darkness for his cap. The hound almost beneath the horse lifted its head and howled, and the frightened beast with a snort reared and jerking away from the man, sprang down the trail in the direction from which he had come.

Halibut arose and fumbled the hammer of his rifle. He had his hands full with the dogs, for they crowded around him whining and growling and in every way manifesting fear of the unseen enemy. He did not understand it. It was a pretty predicament for him to be in, surely. It meant ten miles of a walk, and he was tired. He stepped out and pulled the trigger. The hammer fell dead. No explosion followed, and the circle narrowed toward man and dogs. Halibut sprang for a nearby tree and drew himself up into its branches.

As he swung aloft a dark shape hurried itself into the air, and he heard the horse's teeth snap within a few inches of his pendant legs. "They'll get my hounds," thought the man. "Back, Finch! back, Gabe! Nell you fight, get back there," he cried excitedly.

But the fighting blood was up in the dogs. In numbers they were inferior to the foe, but in fighting tactics they were superior. The master knew each dog by its voice. And now it was Finch whined a challenge, and the whinner of Nell bespoke her eagerness to back him. Gabe, the heaviest of the hounds, had closed on the wolf which had first sprung. Halibut heard the snapping of bones—then a number of other wolves lurched themselves forward. He could hear the dogs snarling as they fought, and he lent his voice to their encouragement.

"Easy, Gabe," he shouted; "Nell, girl, easy now. Lead 'em into the open. Don't let 'em get you in the thick of it."

Halibut had placed another cap on the nipple of his rifle, and as the wolf which had first sprung back into the cleared space he fired into it point-blank. A wild howl told that a wolf had been hit.

"That's all I can do, poor chaps," he called.

"The powder and ball were in the saddle-bags."

"They'll kill them all," cried the man. "They'll kill my dogs. Ha, ha, Dick only knew and would lose the big 'uns."

The "big 'uns" were a pack of wolf hounds which on account of their vicious natures, Halibut kept in confinement.

Even as he spoke, upon his ears fell the sharp crack of a rifle far away on the trail, and as his echo died there arose the deep musical bay of his hounds.

Halibut sprang upright on a limb and probed the darkness with his eyes. Those gallant hounds beneath had heard the baying, too, and they were fighting as they never had fought before. One of the dogs retreated backward, fighting with two giant shapes that strove to bear it to earth. Halibut, with a cry that was half a sob, forgot all caution in the animal love he bore his best and truest companions.

"The M do it for me," he cried; and clutching his rifle he leaped to the ground. He was barely in time to save the brave Nell, who with torn sides and lolling tongue and fallen at last, fighting still and snarling with all her remaining force. Just as one of the wolves sprang, Halibut brought the heavy rifle barrel down upon its head, crushing the skull as though it had been an egg shell. The dog scrambled up and met the other wolf as it sprang toward her master. Then a cyclone of paining, bounding bodies swirled in and there was grand play in the Fire-Lick for a brief space of time.

"Oh, Colonel!" cried a voice. "This way, Dick, let 'em and be quick," the man responded breathlessly.

Dick found his master leaning weakly against a tree.

"Are you 'urt, sir?" he asked, dismounting.

"No. See if they've killed Gabe and Finch, Dick. Lord! but how those little hounds did fight!"

Dick returned in a short time. "I found two dead wolves, and I can't find any of the dogs, sir," he said. "Listen—they're givin' of 'em 'ell, sir, an' no mistake!"

Halibut sat down on a log and drew the maimed dog over against his knee.

"Nell, old girl," he said chokingly, stroking her long ears, "you're a larner, Nell."

The dog whined and licked his hand.

"Pinch, sir," cried Dick, "he's limping, but he's none the worse beyond being sore as anything, sir."

In half an hour the rest of the pack had returned and were gamboling and leaping about Halibut. Great, dejected, throaty dogs those wolf hounds were. Their one consuming desire being to tear down and kill, they felt for the man before them only the blind devotion of dog for master. Halibut had given them more blows than pats, but he knew how to command respect among dogs.

"How many was in the pack, sir?" asked Dick.

He had drawn two dead wolves into the open and was now dragging a third.

"Somewhere about ten, I should judge," replied the Colonel. "But I can't understand why they should be on the rampage at this time of year."

"Look at this one, sir," cried Dick. "It's so thin that 'e must 'ave nigh starved to death. All of 'em are thin. There's only one reason as I can think of that would make 'em vicious, sir: they're starvin'—that's why."

"Nonsense," cried Halibut. "Why, the heavy timber is alive with food."

"Yes, sir, I know that. But you see, sir, these wolves can't get into the 'eavy timber; at least they won't go. They won't go through a people's settlement, an' they can't pass back into the woods by the way they came, sir."

"And why can't they?"

"Well, sir, I think it's 'cause you've put that mill on the creek. You see they must 'ave come by way of the lower swale—hit's the only way they could come. An' when you built it, the saws frightened 'em back further so that they've been all through the second growth and they've naturally been starvin' 'bout, an' it's come to such a pass as they've growed desperate, sir."

"Oh, George, Dick, I believe you're right," cried Halibut.

He arose stiffly and looked about him.

Had A Picturesque Exhibit

A Vivid Portrayal of the Beauties of Canadian Rockies.

The Canadian National Grand Trunk Railway this year combined to make one of the most striking displays in its history of the Canadian National Exhibition. The exhibit, which occupied two of the three main sections of the railway building, gave a new dimension to the extent and resources of the Dominion.

One of the sections was devoted to a vivid portrayal of the beauties of the Canadian Rockies at the point where the peaks reach their greatest heights. The grandeur of the Yellowhead Pass and its surrounding peaks was shown on a scale commensurate with the magnitude of the great mountain chain. The visitor stands under the shadow of a giant cedar, the branches of which arch over the whole of the ceiling. At his feet are the Maligne Falls and the most alien scene of the Maligne River, threatening its way among the foothills. In the background is a panorama 100 feet in length, of the magnificent mountains in Jasper National Park and Mount Robson Park, the two great scenic reserves through which the Canadian National system and the Grand Trunk Pacific Railways make their way to the Pacific Coast.

Mount Edith Cavell, the beautiful park named by the Dominion Government in memory of the martyr nurse, is in the centre of the panorama, and is supported by Mount Gekko, Fitzwilliam, Pyramid, Roche de Smet and Roche Miette, with the massive Mount Robson, the monarch of the Canadian Rockies, looming up in the distance.

The atmosphere of Canada's mountain world was retained in word and in way, and it was difficult for the observer to realize that he was not viewing the scene from some favorable vantage point in the Rocky Mountains. The system of lighting was arranged to give, in various periods of the day, the effects seen among the mountains at sunrise, noonday and evening.

In the second section of the exhibit the working of the Canadian Government marine was featured in connection with the great network of railway lines that is now known as the Canadian National system. Adding a graphic touch to this display, the ships of Canada's merchant marine were seen flashing actual wireless messages, and these were picked up in turn by no fewer than 43 wireless messages. In order to make this possible the Marconi Company installed an aerial system above the railway building to receive messages from all points, these being handled by an operator housed in an exact replica of a steamship's wireless cabin.

Simultaneously the messages were spelled out in Morse by a wonderful system of miniature lamps spread

The Canadian Government department of marine also assisted in making the Canadian National exhibit complete, and showed a remarkable series of aids to navigation, including large revolving lighthouse lanterns and beacon lights, fog horns, etc.

Emphasis was also placed in the exhibition on the opportunities awaiting the settler along the lines of the Canadian National Railways, the whole display being excellently planned and carried out on a high scale of excellence.

Organized Farmers Arrange Joint Drive

Week of November 1st fixed as date for Campaign in three Western Provinces

According to reports received at this office, the week beginning November 1st will witness the greatest organization campaign ever conducted by the farmers' associations of the West. The campaign is to be carried on at the same time in each one of the three Western Provinces under the auspices of the U. P. A., the Saskatchewan Growers' Association and the United Farmers of Manitoba. It is expected that there will be upwards of ten thousand canvassers working under approximately six hundred district captains and forty constituency organizers. These canvassers will personally visit the resident farmers in their respective districts and collect, from each one, money with which to finance the organization.

Plan of Organization

There is, in each of the three provinces, a Central or Provincial Committee. The plans for this joint drive were arranged through a conference of the "Central Committees" and with the consent of the various constituency boards. The plans are uniform for the three provinces.

Messrs. Herbert Greenfield, Westlock; L. M. Goetz, Red Deer and Snow Sears, Nanton, constitute the Central Committee for Alberta. On the recommendation of this committee each of the twelve constituency boards has appointed an organizer who will have full responsibility for organizing the drive for the district.

The constituency organizer—working with the members of the constituency boards—is subdividing all of the territory in the district into units of approximately nine townships each and over each unit of nine townships is placing a "District Captain." The district captains are endeavoring to enlist the services of at least one man or woman in each one-half township under their respective jurisdictions—who will agree to personally visit every resident in the district on November 1st or November 2nd and solicit from each one $3.00, this $6.00 will pay for a membership in the Association—a year's subscription to the official organ—and membership dues in the political organization.

A similar membership drive was made in Saskatchewan last October—and in Manitoba in March 1920. In the Saskatchewan drive upward of 2000 canvassers were enlisted and the sum of $82,000.00 was collected. In Manitoba about 1000 canvassers were in the field and over $50,000.00 was secured.

The drive to be held in November has been much more thoroughly organized and it is confidently expected that upwards of 10,000 active canvassers will be enlisted for campaign.

The Different Treaties Arranged Between Canadian Government and the Indians.

By Totose Apwe
(All rights reserved)

The different treaties arranged between the government of Canada and the Canadian Indians make interesting study.

Liberal Terms

In reading these treaties one cannot but admire the evident intention on the part of the government, as represented by the different treaty commissioners to deed generously, even bountifully, with the red men, who, in entering into the agreements made from time to time, relinquished any rights they may have had in the soil, thus opening a new world for settlement and cultivation by the people who have come from Britain and overcrowded Europe to find homes with us.

In his long report to the Governor-General on these treaties, Lieut. Governor Morris pointed out that the provisions of these agreements must be carried out with the utmost good faith and with the nicest exactness by the government. He emphasized the importance of judicious selection of agents and farm instructors, with the additional aid of well selected carpenters and school teachers. He looked forward to seeing the Indians become faithful allies of the Crown and a gradually increasing and self-supporting people.

It was only to be expected that in the subsequent years the terms of the treaties would be a subject for frequent discussion between the Indians and the local officials appointed to administer and manage their affairs.

As the years passed by there were not a few who contended that many things promised by the treaty commissioner through official interpreters, had not been given to them.

Nor was it a source of satisfaction to the Indian to be asked to produce his treaty parchment and compare the things there enumerated with those he had actually received, because he thus found every promise faithfully performed.

There were among the Indians those who had been present at the treaty-making and who claimed that the interpreters had referred to many things not mentioned in their parchment rolls. They did not hesitate to say that the interpreters had deliberately lied to them.

During the later 60's one of these interpreters suffered from paralysis of his tongue from which he never recovered, and this was quickly seized upon by the Indians as confirmation of his contention, considering his affliction as a punishment for his falsehoods.

In his conferences with his agent or other officials, there was perhaps nothing to which the Indian made more constant reference than an alleged promise that he would receive payment for anything taken from his reserve by the white man, or for his use. This claim was recognized generously but at times led to amusing and often embarrassing circumstances.

A Costly Dinner

In the summer of 1886 Mr. R. H. Williams, now head of the Glasgow House of Regina, had a contract for the erection of an agency dwelling house at File Hills.

A contract for the painting of this structure had been given to the firm of Crapper Bros. The painters, all of whom were sent from Regina, brought with them all the necessary appliances for cooking their meals in the new building.

On a certain Monday morning, at the time set apart for the semi-weekly issue of rations to the Indians, it was observed that more than ordinary care had been bestowed by them in the preparation of their toilet, paint and feathers being in evidence on all sides.

To the initiated this meant a pow-wow with the agent.

"Come on men and yet your rations. This is my busy day," called out Mr. Westover, their instructor. No heed was paid to this invitation. It was evident that other business was to be transacted first. After some inquiry by the interpreter, an old Indian named "Spirit Bird" approached the agent, Mr. P. J. Williams, and very ceremoniously shook hands with him.

After a long harrange he finally charged that white men were taking the Indians' property without payment. Urged for some definite information he laid the formal complaint that on the previous day—Sunday—three turnips had been taken from his garden for the painters' dinner.

The Indians were evidently taking the matter very seriously so that the agent must do likewise. Mr. Painter, who was half a mile away, was promptly sent for and told of his sin.

The warlike dress and attitude of the Indians evidently had its effect on the painter, who not only frankly acknowledged his act, but offered to settle for such charge as the Indians might be pleased to name.

When pressed to state the amount that would restore good feelings between the white man and the red, "Spirit Bird" gave a short address, concluding with an expression of his pleasure that the painter was in a paying mood. "When my good brother, Flatpot, missed some building logs from his reserve and found them on a white man's land, he told his trouble to the judge, who ordered a payment of one dollar for each log. I am ready to settle on the same terms—one dollar for each turnip." Payment on this basis was promptly made.

A Liberal Parliament

Following the rebellion of 1885 the opposition in the Dominion Parliament insisted that a more progressive policy should be followed in dealing with the western Indian.

The result was that Parliament was asked for, and voted, millions of money for this purpose, during subsequent sessions.

In return for the lavish expenditures a departmental policy was inaugurated at Ottawa which aimed at offsetting in a measure, this heavy drain on public funds, by requiring the Indians to supply, without charge, such quantities of hay and wood and other commodities as might be required at the agencies.

Protests, loud and lasting, were made by our File Hills wards. Again and again they emphasized the promise of payment said to have been given them by the treaty commissioner.

In September, 1886, this question assumed a concrete form. Calling the chiefs and headmen together, Agent Williams said to them:

"Since coming among you a year ago, you have not ceased to talk to me about the great White Mother and what she has lately done for you. My friend, Little Calf, not long ago, pointing to the wagons, sleighs, mowers, plows, harrows and other things, told us all in a long address that he feared some great calamity would come upon you unless by honest work and proper use of this machinery you showed your gratitude for the Queen's generosity.

"I have brought you here this morning to tell you of another way to express your thankfulness. During the coming winter and following spring I will require several tons of hay for the government animals at the agency. Let every man of you turn out. I will send with you my instructor, clerk and interpreter. With ten mowers and rakes you will in two or three days put up several hundred tons.

"After the winter has passed you will be permitted to sell for your own benefit any surplus over my requirements. But you must very clearly understand that for my portion you will get no payment. This must be a gift to your Queen."

This proposition was most vigorously opposed by every Indian present. Not until the sun was sinking in the west did the flow of native oratory show any tendency to terminate. Pee-pee-keesia, Star Blanket, The Owl, Stern Child, Buffalo Blanket, all insisted upon the usual cash equivalent, but in the end war could prevail and a reluctant assent was given.

Next morning a long procession of wagons, mowers, and rakes, preceded by carts loaded with provisions for two hundred men, women and children, headed for a hay meadow on Star Blankets reserve, where thousands of tons stood waiting for the action of the mower knife.

The writer, mounted on a mower, was one of the party.

It was afterwards learned that during the night Star Blanket's band held a pow-wow and decided to withdraw their consent. They would lend no assistance. Whether they would show open resistance was uncertain. As it turned out I was the only one to experience an unpleasantness. When about half a mile from the agency Stern Child suddenly emerged from a clump of bushes and throwing up his hands checked the progress of my team.

What to do was the problem which must be solved in a moment. "Get official advice," was the prompt decision, followed by a hasty return to the agent's office.

"Well," said that official, interrogatively, evidently scenting trouble.

"Stern Child stopped my team and took off the neck yoke. What shall I do?"

"Knock Hell out of him,"

"All right sir. My sentiments exactly. I'll do that very thing."

Armed with this sulphur-fumed authority, I returned to the scene of action only to find that my friend had disappeared, thus escaping the purgative measures approved by the agent.

As the Government expected us to celebrate the coming of Peace at any price; and

As we can't possibly get merry on lemon sour; and

As we can raise a shout almost as readily as our landlord can raise the rent; why

Let us all celebrate the end of the war and glorious Peace with hearts as light as our pockets.

O, COME AND BE MY MAID

(With apologies to Marlowe)

Oh, come with me and be my maid!

Your every wish will be obeyed. I'll rise each day to light the fire And do whatever you desire.

Humbly I'll make it all my task To give you everything you ask: A suite of rooms—a limousine—Oh, stay with me and be my queen!

You needn't do the family wash. Or wait on table, trim the squash. Or cook the dinner, scour or rub The silverware, or dust, or scrub.

You needn't soap the children's faces. Put the dishes in their places. Answer when the door-bell rings. Or do those other stupid things.

But I will give you gowns galore And every evening off and more. And gifts and tips—and homage paid.

Oh, stay with me and be my maid!

—Judge (New York.)

Ex-Kaiser in the Public Eye Again

It is reported that the former German Emperor is likely to be the central figure of a gala week which is taking place in Doorn, Holland, and in Amersfoort, which for more than a year was the home of the former monarch. He has given 1,000 guilders to the committee in charge of the National Orange celebration at Amersfoort, where the streets have been decorated with the proceeds of his gift.

The climax of the celebration is to be the formal turning over by William to the president of the Order of the Knights of St. John of a hospital at Amersfoort which was built and furnished by the former emperor as a memento of his stay there.

A few days afterwards is to be the wedding of Elizabeth Von Bentinck, daughter of Count Von Bentinck, who was William's host at Amersfoort, to Captain Hestmann. Preparations are under way for the reception of Prince Henry of Prussia, who will soon arrive to spend ten days with his brother.

Trade Between Canada and Reds Blocked

Agents of the Soviet Government of Russia have made requests that Russian gold shipped to Canada to pay for goods will be guaranteed from any other claims against the Russian Government and the Canadian Government. However, it is understood declined to give any such guarantee or to be involved in any way in the shipment of Russian gold. Opening up trade relations between Canada and Russia is therefore at a standstill.

It is understood that the position taken by the Dominion Government is that if any individual Canadian wishes to trade with the Soviet, or any other government in Russia he may do so, but at his own risk. There are two embargo in the exportation of Canadian goods to Russia, but the exporter will have to make his own arrangements as to pay, as no creditors can be furnished by the Canadian Government.

Westfall of Calgary, Alberta, to Yocka Trach, a Wakaw farmer. Syroischi bought the land for $16 an acre, but represented that he had paid $19.75 an acre for it and had paid out $600 for the complainant which he later collected.

Judge Macdonald in sentencing the accused said it was one of the most detestable crimes, in that an educated man had taken advantage of an illiterate foreigner.

The Postmaster General of Great Britain, in a recent report, gave the figures for Great Britain as two telephones for every hundred of population. On the same basis the United States has 13.6 telephones per hundred. Canada comes next with 10.8 per hundred people; Sweden 5.4; Norway 1917) 4.4; Germany 1914) 2.2; France 1.0; Italy 1912) 0.3.

WESTERN QUESTIONS

CRIME IN THE WEST

Crime appears to be contagious. Following the daring robbery of the Crow's Nest train near Frank, in Alberta, and the fatalities which occurred in connection with it, comes the news of the invasion of northeastern Saskatchewan by a party of armed bandits who have committed several outrages and wounded several persons.

The reputation of northwestern Canada as a law abiding region, despite its remote frontiers, has been remarkable. We have had very little of the lawlessness and wild life which was characteristic of the American frontier. This has been due to two reasons. The first: that the original settlers which came into the country were of that steady, progressive British stock who have an inherent respect for law and order; the second, that the North West Mounted Police, with their splendid organization, and esprit de corps and personal efficiency spread terror in the hearts of evil doers. Of late years, however, many people of foreign extraction have come into the country and the North West Mounted Police has become a Dominion body and have ceased to belong peculiarly to the north west. Most of their local work has been taken over by the provincial police of the western provinces. These men are unquestionably doing good work, and in certain individual instances have performed exploits well worthy of the example set them by the red-coated troopers. However, they have neither the numbers nor the semi-military organization which enabled the Mounted Police to perform their duties so efficiently, and it may be that those inclined to crime do not hold them in the same awe.

The chief offenders against the laws of person and property appear to be men of Russian birth or extraction, and they may, perhaps be influenced by the pernicious Bolshevik doctrines which are being spread abroad in the country of their origin.

It would, therefore, seem as if the first thing to do is to capture and punish the criminals, and then see as few people of their type as possible are permitted to find harborage in Canada. In the past our emigration laws have been much too elastic and many people of whom the authorities could know little were admitted to the country. Last year the emigration laws were amended so as to make them much more stringent, but there is still some room for improvement.

This country is British and we must see to it that there is a sufficient majority of the Anglo Saxon race to stamp their characteristics on the life of the whole country. As long as we keep our British sentiment, tradition and race, we have little to fear.

THE EXCHANGE QUESTION

Despite the adverse exchange rate investors in Great Britain are beginning to take a good deal of interest in Canadian investments. This is particularly true of enterprises which, while sound in themselves give promise of a speculative profit.

Many prominent Britishers have recently visited the Dominion to size up conditions, and there are indications that more are coming.

Various reasons are advanced for the low rate of exchange against Britain and other European countries in the States; it is asserted that it is the result of an inflexible, automatic economic rule. This may be so, but it is sure that the Americans are taking advantage of it to the utmost, to add to their profit in their trading relations with Canada. Why they do this is obvious, when the fact is taken into consideration that the American dollar gains in value, just so soon as it is transferred to the Dominion.

In Canada we are unfortunate enough to be to a certain extent at least, under the influence of the New York money markets and owing to our financial arrangement with the States we are forced to discount to some extent the British pound sterling. It is true that the balance of trade has something to do with this question, but we cannot get the idea out of our minds that the astuteness of the Yankee trader in endeavoring to do business to his national and personal advantage is also a pretty big factor. The way to adjust the matter is to use every possible stimulus to business in Canada; to increase our production and manufacture; and to obtain our commercial independence.

There is every indication, however, that British money will come in considerable sums to the Dominion, despite the adverse exchange rate.

REFUGE FOR AGITATORS

It is announced that the General Secretary of the One Big Union in Canada has been refused admittance to the United States because he is an agitator.

For many years the United States admitted all sorts and conditions of people to their shores—Camorists and Black Handers from Italy; Anarchists from Russia; and revolutionaries from other European countries found within the land of the free a safe asylum and a field for their pernicious activities. Of late, however, the Government of the United States has found out the menace that some of the people may be to the welfare of the country, and stringent immigration regulations have been put into effect.

We are getting too many people of this nature in Canada, and in this respect at least, it would be well for our Government to take a leaf out of the book of our neighbors to the south.

Muskrats are Protected

The trapping season opens on November 1st and no doubt trappers and hunters are getting their implements of warfare ready for the slaughter. However, there is one animal that must not be trapped this year and that is the muskrat, according to Mr. Benj. Lawton, Chief Game Guardian. Trapping muskrats south of the North Saskatchewan river is prohibited at all times until sufficient time has elapsed for the rats to again become reasonably plentiful. At present it is stated, there are scarcely any of these animals to be found in many sections of the southern half of the province. A fine not exceeding $1,000 may be imposed for the violation of this regulation.
